About KCP

The Kentucky Cancer Program is the state mandated cancer control program established by the Kentucky General Assembly in 1982. Administered jointly by the Brown Cancer Center, University of Louisville, and the Markey Cancer Center, University of Kentucky, KCP has 14 cancer control specialists located across the state. These specialists coordinate cancer prevention and early detection programs; patient and family services; professional education and training; and they mobilize communities through coalitions and partnerships to address local cancer problems. The mission is to reduce cancer incidence and mortality through education, research, and service.
